Yale: DS247 A28 H5.

/Written in the form of a personal memoir of the author's official experiences as Governor and Commander and Chief of the British Royal Colony and Protectorate of Aden, from 1951 to 1956 this volume directs its main appeal to the general reader who would appreciate a broad, wide-ranging coverage of twentieth century political changes and developments in Aden. His descriptions of his experience as resident colonial official, of his encounters with high and low ranking Aden subjects, and of his travels and visits through the Colony and Protectorate offer a highly readable and engaging, although sometimes superficial, commentary on the British colonial administration of one of its overseas areas./
